Tadao Ando's He Museum: From Looks to Prevalence
Eliana Xie

Tadao Ando is a 82-years-old Japanese architect born in Osaka. His style can be described as simplistic and minimal. To me, his widely used primary materials such as concrete, stone, or glass, can lean toward contemporary brutalism. One of his most recent projects: He Museum has demonstrated such, it is a heavily Ando-styled structure with floor-to-ceiling glazings and wide windows. The building is 172,000-square-foot in usable area and resides next to an artificial pond. With shifted-floor plates acting as a form of deconstructivism, Ando's versatility is terrifically displayed from this project.

(Art News, 2020)

The He museum situates in Shunde, Guangzhou. With one hour of driving distance away from Hong Kong and forty-five minutes from Shenzhen.

Blurb on architecture from official website: Drawn from ancient Chinese cosmology and philosophy, HEM applies square and circular elements to create a sense of contrast. The central skywell floods the museum with natural light, creating spaciousness, clarity and a symbol of hope. HEM presents the world's one and only

This event is open to the public.

In the spirit of ideas worth spreading, TEDx is a program of local, self-organized events that bring people together to share a TED-like experience. At a TEDx event, TEDTalks video and live speakers combine to spark deep discussion and connection in a small group. These local, self-organized events are branded TEDx, where x = independently organized TED event. The TED Conference provides general guidance for the TEDx program, but individual TEDx events are self-organized (subject to certain rules and regulations).

Last year in November, I was warmly welcomed by HKDI to join their TEDx team as a speaker. Yesterday, the event took place and it was possibly one of the most exciting events I have attended.

The theme was community, design, and wellbeing. My topic revolved around sustainable development with designing skyscrapers in Hong Kong.

Truly grateful for this experience and the support I received from teachers, friends, and family👉
